I have learnt ...

- How to react in some scenes that can happen in real life
- To listen to people in troubles, even though they do not seem like they need help, they sometimes really need some support
- I have learnt, something new about Slovenia, and also that to not judge people only just because they are different
- I have improved my English. I got to know a lot of interesting stuff about the town and the area we lived in called Polšnik. I also learned more things about how to handle bullying and what to do as a witness.
- I have learnt few things about their country, I also learnt some new English words.
- I have learnt, how to make something from Wood. In a Wood muzeum.
- I learn how to bake cookies.
- That I can use higher level of vocabularies without trying too hard, I did not think I could do that, but they just somehow appeared in my mind from reading and watching movies and now I can use them. That made me so proud of myself :)
- I have learned some new words in English and Slovenian country things like music or food

What have you learnt about yourself when working with others in a new environment ?

- That I like to try and to do something new
- I learned that I could be a really good team member, and I can also be the leader, because I know how to guide a team
- I realized I don't have to be scared when working with someone new.
- I don't have so much trouble anymore talking with people I don't know
- I can speak better English, then I guess, when I need it.
- That you need to have a positive attitude to enjoy something, because there are always gonna be bad things. But when you expect it to be bad, you will probably think it was bad, but when you have positive attitude you'll always find something good.
- I'm more social than I thought
- That even tho I am better at something doesn't mean others aren't better at something else than me.
